School Board Refuses Field For Horse Show

Educators Unanimous Against Proposal Made By Directors; Efforts Being Made To Improve Gridiron; First Grade Age Is Changed

Saddle horse competition in the annual Pumpkin Show will not be held on the high school athletic field.

The Circleville board of education, Tuesday night, was unanimously against use of the field for the exhibition when an informal vote was taken.

E. E. Wolf, director of the Pickaway County Agricultural society in charge of the horse department, met with the board to ask that the use of the ground be granted for the show. It was held on the athletic field last year and was one of the outstanding features of the annual celebration.

Efforts have been made to improve the field for this year's football games. School children have not been permitted to use the field as a playground. Recent rains have greatly improved the stand of grass. Board members believe that since the field has been closed to school children it should not be granted for a saddle horse exhibition.

Location Still Uncertain
Location of the saddle horse show was still uncertain Wednesday. Other places being considered are the Heise field, E. Franklin street, and the ball park, W. Mound street. The draft and horse pulling contest will be held in the ball park.

Saddle horse fanciers met at the Eschelman mill offices Tuesday evening to discuss events for the show. Premium lists will be available Thursday.

First Graders Changed
The board of education voted a change in age regulations on first graders. This year 207 children, an unprecedented number, were registered. Under a ruling approved by the board, children must be six years of age before Jan. 1 to start to school. It was previously Feb. 1. The present ruling complies with the practice in other cities. Eight first graders will be removed by the ruling.

The board approved the payment of $150 for new bleachers installed on the athletic field.

OWNERSHIP AND TAGS OF MOTORCYCLE COST PAIR
Two men were fined $50 and costs each, Tuesday evening, by Squire B. T. Hedges, in cases involving ownership and tags on a motorcycle.

Herbert Hill, 535 S. Scioto street, was assessed for operating the motorcycle with tags belonging to another motorcycle. Dwight Richards, 94 N. 20th street, Columbus, was fined for failure to deliver a certificate of title on the motorcycle. Both men arranged to pay their fines.

REDS DOUBLED OUT
Cincinnati's doubleheader at New York, scheduled Wednesday afternoon, was rained out.

EXAMINATION SCHEDULED FOR RURAL MAIL CARRIER
A civil service examination will be conducted in the Circleville post-office to fill a rural carrier position now vacant on Ashville R. F. D. 1. This route serves much of the Walnut township community. Oct. 7 is the final date for receipt of applications.

The salary of a rural carrier is $1,800 annually.

1927 Flood Mark Nears As Rain Continues In Merrimack Valley

BOSTON, Sept. 21—(UP)—A nurse was swept to death in flood waters today as rain-swollen New England rivers and lakes surged over their banks and caused damage totaling at least $800,000.

Miss Linda Woods, North Brookfield, drowned when Doam dam burst as she was passing over it in an automobile driven by Dr. Thomas J. O'Boyle. Dr. O'Boyle futilely attempted to rescue her before pulling himself to safety on a rope. They were returning from a maternity case.

Cities and towns throughout New England were isolated, highways closed, railroad tracks undermined and bridges wrecked by flood waters.

Though heavy showers were predicted for today and tonight, G. Harold Noyes of the Boston weather bureau predicted clearing skies tomorrow. He saw little hope of streams receding before Friday.

Storm May Pass

Early fears that a tropical hurricane would add to New England's plight were allayed by Noyes, who said the storm would pass out to sea south of Nantucket island.

First reports of damage came from the Connecticut river valley, where at noon engineers reported that the Merrimack river was fast approaching the 1927 flood mark. Mayor Dewey G. Archambault of Lowell called an emergency conference of highway and public works officials to discuss flood measures. Workers will sandbag the Beaver Brook section dike.

Rainfall in Boston totaled nearly four inches since Saturday. Elsewhere in New England nearly six inches had fallen.

One-third of Southbridge, including half the business district, was inundated when a dam at one

COUNTY RELIEF LISTS GUARDED FROM POLITICS

COLUMBUS, Sept. 21—(UP)—Central files in each county listing all recipients of any form of public relief or assistance will be protected against political exploitation by a rule forbidding anybody to make copies of the names, State Relief Director William C. Dixon announced today after a conference with Henry J. Berrodin, chief of the state Division of Aid for the Aged.

The new relief law requires county commissioners to establish a "clearing house" to maintain such files and provides the lists shall be public records. Dixon said he did not intercept this as requiring that anyone who chose should be permitted to copy the lists. The conference between Dixon and Berrodin followed the discovery, according to Berrodin, that the Republican organization in Greene county had sent a campaign letter to all old age pensioners, using a list which he said had been obtained from the county relief office.

DEMOCRATS OF COUNTY GATHER FRIDAY AT 8

Democrats of Pickaway county, whether executive or central members or affiliates of the various clubs, are invited to attend a mass meeting Friday at 8 p. m. in the Common Pleas courtroom.

Cards have been sent to members of the various organizations.

Lawrence Goeller, chairman of the executive committee, is arranging the program. The speakers have not yet been announced.

ATLANTIC GALE SWEEPS SHORE

Weather Bureau Orders Storm Warnings Up In New England

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21—(UP)—The weather bureau ordered storm warnings from Atlantic City to Eastport, Me., today as a tropical hurricane raging off the eastern seaboard moved slowly nearer shore.

The storm, which originally threatened the Florida East coast, was centered out at sea but the gales it carried along its edges whipped towns on the eastern seaboard. At Cape Hatteras, N. C., gales reached 58 miles an hour and an exceptionally high tide flooded part of the Cape's narrow strip of land. Winds of 40 mile velocity were blowing at Beaufort, N. C., and at Nags Head, N. C. Telephone communications along the North Carolina coast were damaged.

Advisory instructed small craft along the Atlantic coast to take shelter until the storm passes.

LEGION CHIEFS MOVE TO SHAPE NEW PLATFORM

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 21—(UP)—Committee recommendations from which the American Legion will shape its policy for the year were presented today to the general session of the national convention.

Committees culled the recommendations, on which the legionnaires will vote, from more than 650 proposals submitted by posts throughout the country.

Proposals urged strict neutrality, greater armaments, deportation of alien felons, and criticized radicalism.

Considered certain to be adopted by the convention were proposals from a rigid "hands off" policy by the United States in European troubles. The legion two years ago initiated a strong neutrality stand.

Also anticipated for unanimous approval were proposals for adequate national defense. Leaders speaking for the legion have claimed this is essential to back up neutrality and protect this country from attack.

Rank and file of the 130,000 legionnaires attending the convention rested aching feet while the 1500 delegates held business sessions. Forty thousand marched in the mammoth parade that crept for nine hours yesterday through streets banked with an estimated million people, including 90,000 veterans. Los Angeles police said it was the greatest jam they ever handled.

TAMMANY HALL MAN SELECTED BY REPUBLICANS

Chairman Of Powerful Rules Committee To Lose Post Even If Elected

WAR VETERAN CHOSEN

Progressive Party Places LaFollette On Ticket Fourth Time

NEW YORK, Sept. 21—(UP)—Rep. John J. O'Connor, Tammany Democrat and chairman of the house rules committee whom President Roosevelt denounced as a traitor to the New Deal, was defeated by the Democrats but nominated by the Republicans in yesterday's primary, returns showed today.

His Democratic defeat meant that he had lost the rules committee chairmanship. If he is re-elected in November he will return to congress as a Republican after 20 years of service to Democratic Tammany Hall, and as a member of the minority party he will have to relinquish his important committee job to a Democrat.

F. D.'s First Victory

His defeat was Mr. Roosevelt's first victory in the four state primaries in which he opposed conservative Democrats. Three senators, Ellison D. Smith, S. C.; Millard E. Tydings, Md., and Walter F. George, Ga., were renominated despite his opposition.

James H. Fay, one-legged war veteran endorsed by Mr. Roosevelt won the Democratic nomination. O'Connor defeated Allen W. Dulles for the Republican designation. Fay also was nominated by the American Labor party without opposition.

The Democratic vote, complete, was Fay 8,352; O'Connor 7,799.

The Republican vote, complete was O'Connor 2,953; Dulles 1,969.

O'Connor's boast was that as a Democrat and Republican he had polled about as many votes as both his opponents in the 16th assembly or "gas house" district. But he protested the conduct of the election and said he might demand a recount in at least four precincts.

Attack Continued

He had continued to assail the New Deal until his final statement, delivered in front of a polling booth after he had voted.

CADIZ, O., Sept. 21—(UP)—The prosecution's top witness, Charles Ford, was expected on the stand today in the murder trial of Peter Serino, a Pittsburgher, accused of slaying Ohio Highway Patrolman George Conn.

Display of the clothing worn by Conn at the time of his death last Sept. 27 furnished a climax to the trial late yesterday when relatives of the slain patrolman wept in court.

The patrolman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Conn, his aunt, Minnie Conn, and a sister, Neva, could not restrain their feelings as the blouse, trousers, then bullet-pierced undershirt were shown.

Soviet Foreign Minister Says Paris Refused To Assist Czechs

GENEVA, Sept. 21—(UP)—Maxim Litvinov, Soviet Russia's foreign minister, told the League of Nations assembly today that Russia had wanted a conference among the war departments of Czechoslovakia, France, and Russia, to devise means to protect the Czech republic from Nazi Germany, but that France had refused.

He also revealed that France had refused the Soviet proposal to "afford assistance to Czechoslovakia by the ways open to us."

Speaking for one of the two nations by treaty to defend Czechoslovakia against aggression, Litvinov attacked British and French policy. France he blamed for the present plight of the Czechs. The

CARAVAN COMES BACK TO STATE AFTER LONG TOUR

MARIETTA, Sept. 21—(UP)—Returning to Ohio after a four month absence, the "pioneer" caravan of the Northwest territory celebration today presented its pageant at Fort Recovery, near the Indiana border.

The caravan will conclude its tour, started last December in Ipswich, Mass., on Oct. 11 at Belpre, near here. The party left Ohio in May and has visited other states of the old Northwest Territory this summer.

Scheduled stops are Van Wert, Thursday; Lima, Friday; Piqua, Saturday and Sunday; Greenville, Monday; Eaton, Tuesday; Dayton, Sept. 28; Oxford, Sept. 29; Hamilton, Sept. 30; Cincinnati, Oct. 1-2; Norwood, Oct. 3; Georgetown, Oct. 4; Manchester, Oct. 5; Portsmouth, Oct. 6; Ironton, Oct. 7; Gallipolis, Oct. 8-9; Pomeroy, Oct. 10; Belpre, Oct. 11.

Bert Downey, Springfield, Rotary district governor, Thursday noon, will make his official visit to the club. Mr. Downey has called a meeting of all directors and committee chairmen for 11 a. m. in the hotel.

CZECHS AGREE TO RELINQUISH SUDETEN AREA

Der Fuehrer Takes Another Step Toward Making The Reich Greater Power Than Before World Conflict

POST-WAR ALLIANCES COLLAPSE

Chamberlain Ready to Visit Nazi Chief In Godesberg; Soviet Sees Danger Of Another Struggle

PRAGUE, Sept. 21—(UP)—The Czech government bowed under the "irresistible pressure" of Britain and France today and formally surrendered to Adolf Hitler's demand for partition of the Republic.

By UNITED PRESS
Europe surrendered to Adolf Hitler today the key to Nazi dominance of Central Europe.

Government leaders of Czechoslovakia, pushed to the limit by Great Britain and France, agreed subject to parliamentary approval to give Germany the rich Sudetenland frontier mountains as the price of avoiding suicidal war.

Germany—risen from the ashes of the World War—rejoiced. Czechoslovakia shuddered under the danger of army rebellion.

France uncertainly watched collapse of 20 years work on post-war security alliances.

Soviet Russia thundered that the democracies were selling out to "sabre rattlers" today only to make certain a great war tomorrow.

Italy backed up the increasingly vigorous demands of Hungary and Poland for further dismemberment of Czechoslovakia.

But Great Britain, certain that she is choosing the only alternative for a war that would destroy Europe, will send Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain to the Rhineland town of Godesberg—the Hill of the Gods—tomorrow to make Hitler the most powerful man in many generations of continental war and peace.

To Turn History

The crisis over the Sudeten minority in Czechoslovakia admittedly is a turning point in Europe's post-war history. The fate of the Sudetenland itself is incidental. The significance of the conflict lies in its bearing on Hitler's "Drang Nach Osten"—the famous march to the East by which he expects to re-establish the Reich as a great, if not the greatest, world power.

Czechoslovakia, with its frontier mountain barrier, necessarily became the point at which the German eastward thrust must be resisted if the powers opposed to Nazism were to resist effectively. But rather than plunge Europe into a conflagration that might easily end in complete destruction—a war that it was certain nobody could win—Great Britain and

STATE TO OPEN BIDS FOR WORK ON HIGHWAY 22

Bids will be opened by John J. Jaster, Jr., state director of highways, at 10 a. m. Friday for the rebuilding of Route 22, just west of Circleville, to eliminate flood troubles.

The project, to require 280 working days, is estimated to cost $224,976.84. The improvement will be 1.376 miles in length including a pavement 24 feet wide on a 40 foot roadway.

Location of the road will be changed at several points and bridges constructed to permit flood waters to pass under the roadway. Traffic will be detoured through Fox.

GOODESBERG—Hitler expects to meet British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain tomorrow for completion of deal for Sudetenland; probably will diplomatically back Polish and Hungarian demands or dismemberment of Czechoslovakia.

GENEVA—Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov tells powers they have betrayed Czechs by "granting bonuses for sabre rattling" but that they merely avoid a problematic war today in order to get a "certain and large scale war tomorrow."

AT GOODESBERG, Germany, near Cologne, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain and Fuehrer Adolf Hitler of Germany renew their important conferences on the Czechoslovakian question. Chamberlain laid before Hitler the Anglo-French plan agreed on in conferences in London.

Foreign Front

BY UNITED PRESS

PRAGUE — Czechoslovak government surrenders subject to approval of parliamentary groups, to Fuesher Adolf Hitler's demand for annexation of Sudetenland. Stock exchange trading suspended.

BERLIN—Germany, with 339,000 troops reported massed on Czech frontier, confident objectives have been gained without war as result of Hitler's warning to Great Britain and France that Nazis would strike unless demands were met.

GOODESBERG—Hitler expects to meet British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain tomorrow for completion of deal for Sudetenland; probably will diplomatically back Polish and Hungarian demands or dismemberment of Czechoslovakia.

TAMMANY HALL MAN SELECTED BY REPUBLICANS

Chairman Of Powerful Rules Committee To Lose Post Even if Elected

His revolt against the New Deal cropped out during the fight over the governmental reorganization bill in the last congress. He used his committee chairmanship to direct the successful drive against the bill. He also bottled the wages and hours bill in committee, until it was forced out. His entrance in the Republican primary split that party in his district. The regular county leaders opposed him and entered Dulles in the race after a strong Republican faction including Col. Theodore Roosevelt, had decided that O'Connor would represent them than a candidate of their own party. Other Republicans and the county leaders, headed by Kenneth Simpson, said they could never support a Tammany Democrat.

Tammany Behind Loser Tammany, the official Democratic party in New York county, was almost solidly behind O'Connor, but there were reports that some district leaders had "knifed" him secretly.

Fay closed his campaign by charging that O'Connor had said that President Roosevelt "would be willing to plunge the United States into war to get himself re-elected."

"This," Fay said, "is equivalent to accusing the President of treason. But this kind of wildness is not new to O'Connor."

Other primary results were: NEW JERSEY — Republicans nominated W. Warren Barbour for the senate by overwhelming majority. Democrats nominated William H. J. Ely, unopposed. Eleven of 14 incumbent congressmen sought renomination, only one was opposed.

WISCONSIN—Gov. Philip F. LaFollette, was renominated to unprecedented fourth term by his new party, National Progressives of America. His opponent, Glenn Turner, Socialist, got small protest vote as a result of LaFollette's break with Milwaukee Socialists. Robert K. Henry and Julius P. Heil were running close race for Republican gubernatorial nomination and Henry was leading Jerome Fox for the Democratic nomination. Sen. F. Ryan Duffy, D., praised by President Roosevelt for his loyalty to the New Deal, was unopposed for renomination.

MASSACHUSETTS — Democrats nominated James M. Curley for governor. A former governor, 63 years old, he defeated three opponents including Gov. Charles F. Hurley and Lieut. Gov. Francis A. Kelly. Everett Saltonstall, former house speaker, won the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Incomplete returns indicated that all 15 Massachusetts congressmen — 10 Republicans and five Democrats — had been renominated.

WAVERLY DOG CONTESTS SCHEDULED ON OCT. 1-2

Pickaway county owners of fine dogs are interested in the foxhound and beagle field trials being conducted by the Pike County Fish and Game Protective association two miles west of Waverly on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 1 and 2.

The course is just off state route 550.

Numerous prizes will be awarded to winners.

CZECHS AGREE TO RELINQUISH SUDETEN AREA

The Czechs, they argued, could be nothing but losers in any circumstances. Perhaps 300,000 German troops were massed on the Sudeten frontier ready to strike and Hitler hinted they would strike Thursday midnight unless the little republic capitulated. By surrender, the Prague government may have a chance to save something, the British contended. By resistance they are certain to lose all and the rest of Europe might easily be pulled down with them.

Understanding Sought

Now, if the Czech surrender is not disrupted by rebellious elements at home, the British and French program envisages a great attempt by the European powers to stabilize the peace of Europe for years to come. Chamberlain believes that the democracies can live side by side with the dictatorships if they once come to a general understanding; that the present chaos can be turned into law and order that will end, too, the civil war in Spain.

There are many who disagree with him. In Britain and in France and in the official activities of Soviet Russia there is a thread of fear that the present surrender—greatest of a long series of capitulation to the dictatorial bloc—means merely that totalitarian government will seize more and more. That fear, which is a minority fear in Britain and France, creates the specter of the United Kingdom and France sinking to the position of secondary powers.

In any event, the result of the stupendous international deal forced by Hitler returns Germany to an equal footing among the powers. The rankle of World War defeat has been wiped out. The way has been opened for economic stability by drawing the Central European powers into the Nazi orbit. And, barring a sudden upset, they will come into the Nazi orbit.

Germany is in a position economically, politically and militarily to exert over middle Europe an influence that has cost Britain and France many millions of dollars since the World War. Already, in trade agreements, the Reich has established that influence. With a diplomatic and military triumph such as is now in the offing, her natural geographic position will make certain her power to sway little nations which must stand always on the side of the winner.

Problems Pending

Repercussions of the showdown on Czechoslovakia will be felt for a long time—might still flare into war on a few hours notice in event of untoward developments. The mere technicalities of completing the Czech deal are great and cannot be carried through without difficulties.

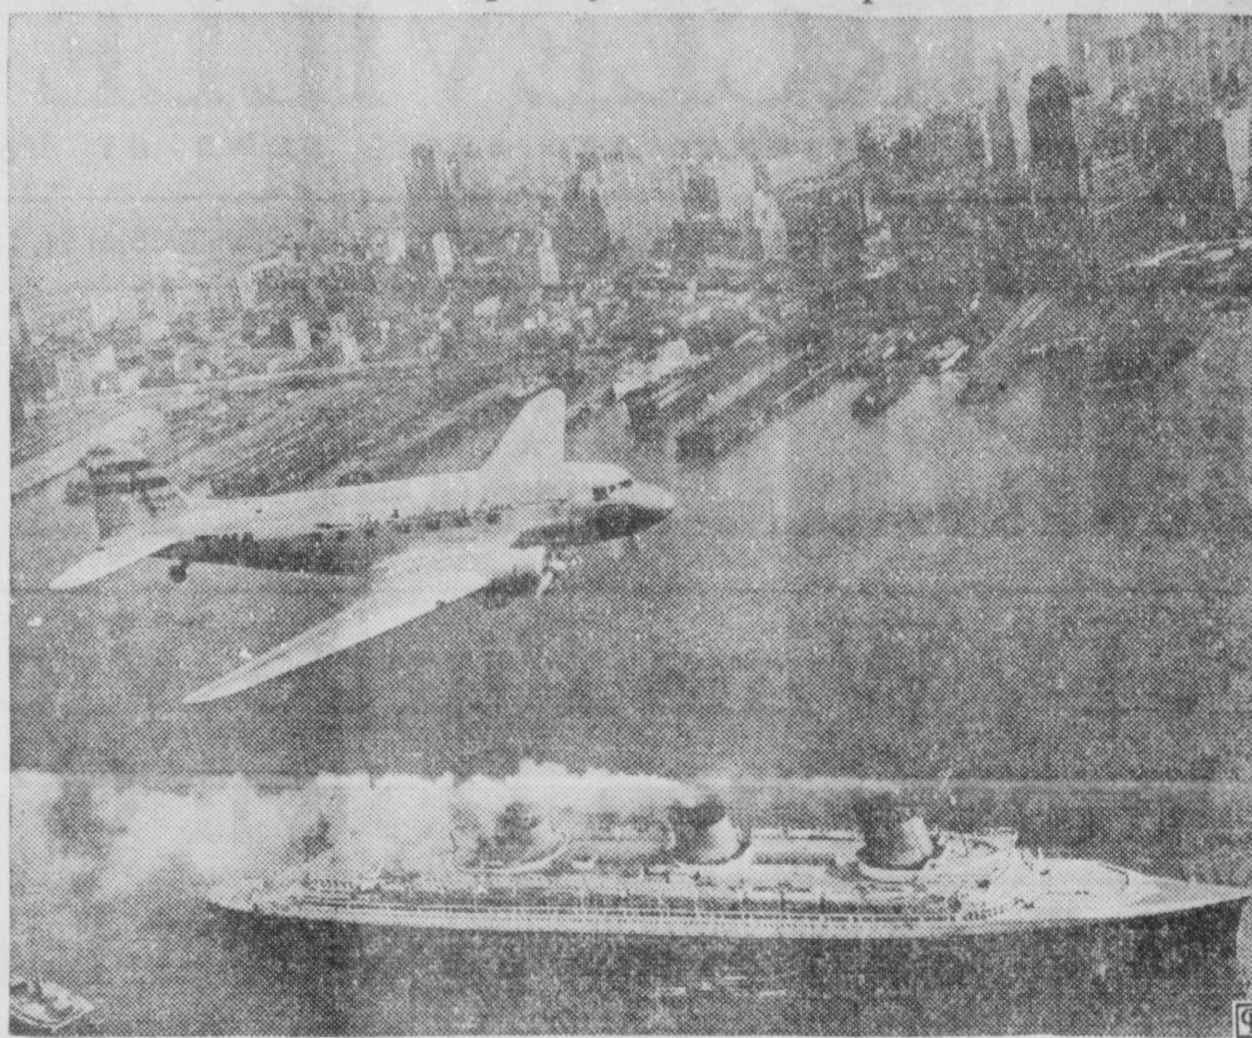

Britain and France must go through bitter parliamentary fights which conceivably could upset the entire deal. The Czechs are famous as fighters and may take matters out of the hands of their government leaders. The Sudeten Nazis are itching to race back across the frontier from Germany and begin shooting. Russia and Roumania warned against any move to take away their minority populations.

In the world financial markets were repercussions, too. The Prague stock exchange was suspended. Ireland sold $10,800,000 worth of British securities, which had been part of the national currency backing. Czech bonds collapsed in London. The New York stock market opened hesitantly, waiting to see what happens.

Europe, too, waited anxiously to see what happens.

British policy of "non-resistance to evil and humoring aggressors" had strengthened "the aggressor bloc" of Germany, Italy, and Japan, he said.

He told the delegates of the nations which remain in the league, that the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia today would not prevent a large scale war tomorrow.

Chubby, eloquent, Litvinov addressed a packed gallery and a tense assembly. He told them that international problems could not be settled by "granting bonuses for sabre rattling."

Litvinov's criticism of British policy was ironic. He said there were two ideas on how to preserve peace: (1) by a strong stand against aggression; (2) by treating the aggressor "with consideration so his vanity will not be wounded."

Litvinov, a celebrated orator, was in rare form, missing his condemnation of aggressors. The gallery and the assembly listened for the most part in deep silence, but there was applause when he said that he felt that all the nations represented sympathized with Czechoslovakia. A maker of the Russian revolution, once considered a dangerous revolutionary, Litvinov, with his neat black tie and the handkerchief tucked in his breast pocket, would have passed in a crowd for a small town music teacher.

to be tried for the slaying. The others are Bernard Masulla, of Pittsburgh, and Booker Johnson and Charles Ford, both Ohioans.

Frank Hurd, of Akron, and C. P. Koehler, of South Euclid, O., told of finding the patrolman's body beside the highway. Corporal Wolmer Vance told of the finding of eight empty shells from a .32 automatic pistol near it.

Col. Lynn Black, commandant of the state highway patrol, verified that Conn was on duty and Dean G. Roberts that he was killed on a state highway.

Mayor Homer Williams, of Freeport, testified to the finding of an automobile service certificate ripped by a bullet hole and bearing the name William Brendy. He said that this first had led to a Brady gang murder theory, but that the car later was traced to Minnesota.

Prosecutor Fred Orum said in his opening statement to the jury that the state would attempt to prove that four men and two women were in the automobile which Conn had stopped just before he was killed.

Jesse K. George, counsel for Serino, said the defense would try to prove that Serino was in Easton, Pa., with his mother on the day Conn was slain.

A "Bernice Bradley" also was indicted for the patrolman's murder but never was apprehended. Crum said the prosecution would show that another woman was bound and placed on the floor of the back seat of the "death car."

KILLER OF SEVEN HUNTED

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept. 21.—(UP)—Soldiers were sent today to the town of Palmas Orian, in Oriente province, to join the search for Benito Orres, 25, a mulatto, who ran amok with a machete because he had been banished from home. He decapitated his mother, step-uncle, three sisters, aged 16, 14 and 12, two brothers, aged 10; wounded two other brothers and two sisters and set fire to the house.

NEW DEAL GOES TO COURT FOR FARM PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(UP)—The New Deal marshalled its legal forces today to defend its farm program in court.

The constitutionality of the farm act will be at issue Friday in federal court at Valdosta, Ga., where tobacco growers seek to overthrow its quota and penalty tax provisions.

Attorneys for the justice and agriculture departments said that regardless of the Georgia decision a direct appeal to the supreme court virtually is certain. They hope for a decision at the court's next session.

The constitutionality of the original Agricultural Adjustment Administration act was fought in the courts almost three years ago. The supreme court held in the Hoosac mills case that the processing tax upon which it was founded was unconstitutional.

In defending the new farm program, government attorneys are in the unusual position of siding with warehousemen against farmers. The growers sued to prevent warehousemen from collecting a penalty tax on excess marketings.

The suit was the first challenge of the validity of marketing quotas under the act passed by the last session of congress.

FAYETTE FARMERS SEEK MYSTERIOUS WILD ANIMAL

WASHINGTON C. H., Sept. 21.—Farmers in the district between Bowersville and Jamestown are seeking a mysterious wild animal that has been preying on poultry and small pigs.

The animal is described as being brown, has short hair, pointed ears and the markings of a coyote or wolf. It was killing chickens when seen. Three 30-pound pigs and several lambs have been killed in addition to many chickens.

RAIL BRAKEMAN CHARGED WITH CAUSING WRECK

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 21.—(UP)—Southern Pacific railroad officials waited for Leonard Jacobson to recover from hysteria today before questioning him about throwing the switch that wrecked two crack passenger trains yesterday.

J. H. Dyer, vice-president of the Southern Pacific and a passenger on the Californian when it was struck by the Argonaut, said Jacobson muttered over and over again:

"I'm not crazy but I don't know why I did it."

The death toll from the crash stood at 11. Four of the 111 persons injured were in critical condition at an Indo, Calif., hospital. It was the worst train wreck in the West since the Olympian plunged into a Montana creek killing 44 passengers and trainmen and injuring 67.

The Californian had gone on a siding near the Arizona-California border, 180 miles East of Los Angeles, shortly after 2 a. m. It was stationary when hit by the Argonaut.

HUNGARY JOINS IN DEMAND FOR ITS MINORITY

Government Men Return Home After Conference With Hitler

719,000 MAGYARS SOUGHT

Roumania Warns Smaller Nations Against Rash Actions

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Sept. 21.—(UP)—Hungary cast its lot with Germany in the Czechoslovak minority crisis today and demanded custody of the Czechoslovak area inhabited by 719,000 Magyars—the Hungarians' racial brethren.

Poland, meanwhile, demanded the area inhabited by 82,000 Poles, and Roumania, fearful that a general revision of Central European boundaries and reunion of races was in the offing, warned smaller nations against "trying to emulate great powers."

Should the seizure of minorities extend eastward, Roumania would stand to lose the district North of the Transylvania Alps, largely populated by Hungarians which was stripped from Austria-Hungary and given to it at the end of the World War.

The Hungarian premier, Bela Imredy, Foreign Minister Koloman De Kanya and chief of staff Gen. Ludwig Keresztes-Fischer, returned by airplane last night from Berchtesgaden, Germany, where they conferred with Chancellor Adolf Hitler and Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop. It was understood that they had urged Hitler to demand the right of "self-determination" for Hungarian and Polish minorities when he meets Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain tomorrow for the showdown on his demand for the return to Germany of the Sudeten German area of Czechoslovakia.

Question Discussed

Imredy said he had a friendly conversation with the German Fuehrer, "concerned exclusively with the Czech question."

"We all know that the elected representatives of Hungarians living in Czechoslovakia have demanded self-determination," he said. "This demand . . . had intense repercussions in our country. The Hungarian government knows its duty which consists in promoting by all available means this justified claim to self-determination . . . in these historical hours and days there is one duty for all members of the nation, namely unity and discipline."

Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Hungarian regent, still was in Germany, ostensibly merely a guest of Field Marshal Hermann Goering at his hunting lodge in East Prussia.

Previously, Hungary had demanded only autonomy for its Czechoslovak minority, but it was plain today that government leaders were bent on annexation.

In Warsaw it was announced officially that the number of refugees pouring into Poland from Czechoslovakia had increased sharply. Many were said to be deserters from the Czech army—men of Polish, German, Hungarian and Slovakian nationality—who entered Poland with full military equipment. Many young men also had fled to evade military service.

The next morning, when I called on him, he says, "Well, the three men read the play and all voted to strike out one act." I said, "Well, that wouldn't be so bad, would it?" And he says, "No, but the trouble is—each one voted to strike out a different act."

Walnut And Hickory Nut Crops Decide Governor?

By S. D. FRIDLEY
Ashville, Phone 79

It used to be that with a heavy walnut crop there was sure to come a Republican governor and there is a lot of this kind of "fruit" this year. But that doesn't mean a thing. Hickory nuts, a heavy crop of them, and the Democrats won. But in recent years the Democrats have won so often that the poor hickories couldn't stand the pace and died while the walnuts loafed and are yet at it. Hickory trees, though, are known for the good Saw (yer) logs they make. And to you "tough old guys" we can not help reminding you of those hickory pole raisings and torch light processions. And too, when a good citizen Republican was not near as good as a Democrat horse thief.

Ashville—Come on in and get your application blanks to Washington for this good rural mail carrier job. The postmaster told us "pint blank" yesterday that he had changed his mind about giving us the job and so we're out. But what we are telling you in earnest and the whole truth is, up to yesterday, there had not been a single application blank filled and sent to Washington. Around forty have talked about taking the required examination but up to yesterday no one has filed.

NEGRO DANCING STAR IN FIGHT WITH STUDENTS

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 21.—(UP)—Bill Robinson, the Negro tap dancing star, was at liberty on his own recognizance today after he had been held in jail for an hour last night on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

Police said Robinson engaged in a street corner altercation with Paul Moffat, 21, substitute center on the University of Southern California football team. Moffat was taken to a hospital for treatment of a cut on the head.

Moffat told officers he and Barney Marshall, 21 year old manager of the U. S. C. Track team, had started to drive across an intersection. Moffat said they almost collided with Robinson's new sedan and the tap dancer became angry.

Robinson, who is 60 years old, jumped out of his automobile, the football player said, and started talking in a loud voice. A fight started, and Robinson was said to have pulled out a gun with which he struck Moffat on the head.

Police arrived and separated the combatants. They said Robinson had a permit to carry the gun.

Robinson was taken first to University police station and then transferred to Central station. After being held in jail for an hour he was taken to night court to arrange bail. Municipal court authorities decided, however, to release him without going through the formality of forcing him to post bond. He was ordered to report back to court today.

Moffat, a 200 pound 21 year old athlete, was taken to Georgia street hospital. Attendants said he suffered several cuts about the head which were not serious.

SCHOLARLY FLYERS

AIR travelers often notice the unusual quality of pilots, as shown by their manners, speech and range of information, but the fact is easily explained. It appears that a big majority of them are college men, and the others usually have considerable education and culture. High standards are demanded.

It is not necessary, though, to accept literally the statement of a personnel director in Chicago, who says: "If you have any doubts about the ability of the pilots of a modern air transport plane to sound his broad A, give the square root of an isosceles triangle or delve into the ancient lore of the Roman Empire, you don't know that most of these men were fraternity members and honor students."

Honors, no doubt; but broad A's fraternity life and ancient learning have little to do with it.

A high degree of character, also, seems to go with flying. Consider that aviator, who, knowing he was going to crack, managed to steer his plane down a straight street, away from houses and playing children. He landed, near death, in the hospital but the children and their homes are safe.

ROADS TO ALASKA

LOUIS Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War has stated that his recent 9,000 mile survey of the northern Pacific coast by air has convinced him that aviation is the key to the development of Alaska. A journey taking five days by steamer can be accomplished in five hours by airplane.

But Johnson is also interested in the possibility of a road. Not the interior roadway over mountains proposed by another official traveler lately, with a strip bought from Canada and other fantastic features, but a shore drive — an international highway all the way from Alaska down through Mexico to South America.

This sounds idealistic from the human standpoint in relation to its cost. But the far look ahead is needed these days. And the time will come when peace among the nations will make a shore drive safe. Islands protect a good part of the northern coast from the worst ocean storms. And what a highway that would make! There is some of the most beautiful scenery in the world to attract tourists — a vacation country second to none for the dallying motorist, with the man on business enjoying the views from his plane.

The question now is, whether a million or two of Germans with guns can be started marching without going off the reservation.

World At A Glance

Generally speaking, President Roosevelt has lost his fight to dictate this year's Democratic congressional nominations. True, most of the New Dealers he endorsed have been renominated, but not quite all of them. He lost Senator Pope in Idaho, Senator McAdoo in California and a scattering of lower house members, such as Representative Maverick in Texas. In short, he wasn't altogether successful in the renomination of New Deal incumbents, who usually are easier to keep in office than it is to enable new aspirants to break in initially. On the other hand, the Democratic Old Dealers, toward whom the Administration has been more or less openly hostile, have been practically uniformly victorious. Besides, several Old Dealers, whom the Administration didn't oppose (because it realized the hopelessness of trying to beat them) again are in the running.

GAIN NOT ENOUGH

Net results: Democratic anti-New Dealers in the 76th Congress will be slightly (not much) more numerous, in comparison with pro-New Dealers, than in the 75th Congress.

There's this qualification:

The Republicans probably will gain two or three Senate seats and quite a little block of Representatives' seats in November. They won't gain enough seats to change the legislative body's essential Democratic-Republican complexion — as per party labels. But party labels no longer mean anything. The Republicans who win will be the same things as anti-New Deal Democrats.

Yes, there will be a few third and fourth partyites—Farmer-Labor folk and LaFollette Progressives. Yet even these will not be genuine New Dealers.

Among the independents the only 100 percent New Dealer I know of is Senator Norris. Senator Norris isn't a Democrat, a Republican, a Farmer-Laborite or a LaFolletteite. He's a Rooseveltian. However, he isn't numerous.

There will be then, in the 76th Congress, three groups:

1—Rooseveltians and Senator Norris.

2—Anti-New Deal Democrats and Republicans.

3—Farmer-Laborites and LaFollette Progressives.

The Rooseveltians, Senator Norris, the Farmer-Laborites and the LaFollette Progressives will be in a majority, but it won't be cohesive. It will split two or three ways or many questions.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN,

VISIT TREMENDOUS BLUNDER

WASHINGTON — Neville Chamberlain will go down in history either as the greatest diplomatic saviour or the greatest diplomatic bungler of our time.

It is too early as yet to say what the verdict will be, but consensus of opinion in diplomatic circles is that it may be the latter.

Chamberlain had one great thing to gain by his sensational flight to Hitler's mountain-top — time. If he could sidetrack Nazi military intentions and divert them into a maze of diplomatic conversations, then war might be postponed until the winter months and after.

On the other hand, Chamberlain had one great thing to lose — realization by Germany that the British are scared, so scared that they may not come to the aid of the Czechs and France.

This is what the Nazis are devoutly praying, and definite evidence of this was what they got from the Chamberlain trip. The natural interpretation was that Germany now was top-dog in Europe—strong enough to make the British lion put its tail between its legs and plead on bended knee for peace.

BRITISH VACILLATION

It is now an axiom of history that if Sir Edward Grey had told the Germans flat-footedly in 1914 that Britain would come into any war, then the Kaiser never would have invaded Belgium.

Today it probably is equally true that if Chamberlain told Hitler flat-footedly that Britain would fight, then the Nazis would not invade Czechoslovakia.

Today, however, British belligerency is so discounted by Franco's sinking of 50 British ships, with hardly a protest from London, that Germany figures Britain will take almost anything lying down.

That is why Chamberlain would have had to talk really tough to Hitler to get anything across, and that is also why all reports from the Berchtesgaden conversations indicate that Hitler, not Chamberlain, was the man who talked tough. He is reported to have informed his British visitor that the Sudeten area was one for Germany, and Germany alone, to settle, and he wanted no help from the rest of the world in settling it.

Alleged unfair treatment of the Sudeten Germans, of course, is only a Nazi excuse for attempting to lay hands on the long corridor of Czechoslovakia extending southeast to the wealth of Rumania and the Russian Ukraine.

And no matter what Chamberlain may work out with Hitler, it can only be a postponement of the Nazi determination to lay hands on that corridor. When this comes, it will mean war, for both Czechoslovakia and Russia are sure to fight.

NOTE:—Henry Adams, writing in 1899, said: "For the last generation since 1865, Germany has been the great disturbing element of the world, and until its expansive force is decidedly exhausted I see neither political nor economical equilibrium possible."

If Europe busts loose again, some of those haughty nations will soon be only something in the school histories for our children to read about.

How Growth of Cells Causes Tumors to Form

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE LAST of the fundamental processes of disease which we have to consider is tumor formation. We said when we were considering inflammation that it was defensive and protective in character, and also that it was a change involving only cells that were always normally present in the body.

Neither of these things can be said of tumor formation. It appears to have no purpose. It is not initiated in response to invasion of a foe, or of an injury (as inflammation is), and often the cells involved are not at all like the cells present in the adult body.

For that reason the subject—which includes the subject of cancer—is objectionable to many people.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

ple. But since this week we are trying to get a broad view of the nature of all disease processes we must include it.

A tumor is the purposeless growth of a group of cells. It may involve any kind of cell in the body. Thus we have bone tumors—osteoma, and muscle tumors—myoma, and tumors of fibrous connective tissue—fibroma, and tumors of epithelial tissue—epithelioma.

The cells begin to multiply very rapidly when a tumor begins—just as rapidly as in the first stages of life when the child is being formed. They seem suddenly to be endowed with the vigor and energy of new life. This has led to the theory that the cause of tumors is what are called embryonal nests—nests of cells that have lain quiescent since before birth, and then begin to take on the rapid characteristics of growth of that early period. This theory, however, cannot be proved in all cases.

Another distinction in tumor is that between benign and malignant. The terms explain themselves. The malignant tumors include cancer. A benign tumor may grow vigorously for a while and then stop altogether. The maignant tumor never stops growing. The cells continue to multiply if left alone, until death supervenes. The other characteristic of the malignant tumor that is different from the benign is that it gets into the blood stream or the lymphatic stream and sets up growth in a different part of the body from that of its origin. This is called metastasis. One cell from the tumor apparently will get into the lymph stream, and lighting on a lymph node begin to multiply with great rapidity.

The body offers no defense of itself to tumors. But medical science has developed most efficient means to stop them. Surgery, X-ray and radium are those means. Early diagnosis is important. The subject may not be pleasant, but in this life it has to be faced, and those who do it promptly and courageously win the victory.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

Reader: "Is sleeping sickness caused by a germ? Does it come from other causes, and what are these causes?"

Answer: "Sleeping sickness" is the name used for several different diseases. Tropical or African sleeping sickness is caused by an animal parasite. The sleeping sickness common and epidemic in America is caused by a germ. Prolonged narcolepsy (a comatose state without fever) is due to a nervous derangement—hysteria—not to a germ.

V. C.: "Will you please be so kind as to tell me whether there is any truth in the fact that sinus trouble can be relieved by diet?"

Answer: Diets have been proposed for sinus disease, but in my opinion are not beneficial.

AFRAID TO MARRY

HELEN WELSHIMER

Written for and Released by CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Judy Rogers, New York heiress, whose father has been wiped out in a financial crash, finally lands a job as social secretary to the wealthy Abbey Boland. Heart-broken because Craig Denby, the man she loved, married another girl, she finds herself becoming interested in Ronald Birrell, brilliant young attorney from Tennessee who recently joined the firm of her father's lawyers. Judy's father has gone west with her stepmother while her own mother, remarried, is abroad. When Craig and his bride have a misunderstanding, it is Judy who brings them together. Abbey is making preparations for her marriage to a count. Judy observes that Ronald, one of the many guests at the Boland estate, takes an unusual interest in Abbey's affairs. Judy is present when the Count, in the Boland library, is about to extract a book from the rows of imitations there. Then Abbey appears, much embarrassed.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 22

HOW DESPERATELY much Abbey wished to hold on to her count came to Judy's immediate attention Tuesday morning. All day Monday Judy had been busy with her work, while Abbey and Count Philippe went into the city. Tuesday morning Abbey came in.

"Miss Rogers, something has happened to our books. The binder is delaying. So we want the empty shelves—the ones with phony volumes—refilled. Can you catch a train into the city and place an order? Oh, yes, you'll have to see how many things we need. The butler will attend to that."

If Abbey would go to such lengths to retain the count's respect, why would she play with his affections by devoting herself to Ronald? Judy asked herself the question, decided it was none of her business, and prepared for the trip into the city. She ordered the books, gazed at the size of the bill—a bill which would have seemed relatively small to Judy four months before—did a little shopping, and went to the Long Island section of the Pennsylvania railroad to catch her train.

She was walking down the long approach, having descended the steps from the main station, when she saw a familiar figure ahead of her. She had not known that Count Philippe was in the city, too. At first she did not think the tall woman going down the same promenade was with him. Then the woman smiled up, into the lean, dark face, and he looked down at her, gravely but with dancing lights in the provocative eyes.

Judy turned and went out of her way so they need not meet. After all, Count Philippe knew any number of charming women all over the world, of course. She went into a car, found a seat, and tried to hide behind a newspaper. One eye, though, watched the commuters. When she saw Count Philippe coming, she pulled the paper higher and became immersed in black words that meant nothing.

The paper was removed from her hands. The count slipped into the seat at her side.

"May I?" he asked. "I'm sure it will be much more instructive, as well as entertaining, to talk to me. I trust you have arranged for a readable library?"

Judy spoke slowly. "I think you are perfectly horrible! Mr. Boland shouldn't settle one good American dollar on you. We have rules over here about not smiling at our hosts' idiosyncrasies. And when we are accepting—I mean, when we are recipients..."

"Go ahead, finish the sentence. When we are recipients of their charity, we should guard our tongues."

"All right, that's what we are, both of us."

"In other words you don't approve of marrying for money? But you don't think love's a worthy basis, either. What do you think, Miss Rogers?"

"I don't think." After all, he and Abbey were following an accepted pattern. He would have his money. She would have her title. If the marriage grew irksome, it could be ended. That was what people thought. Her mother and father, Marjorie's mother and father, her aunt, the parents of other schoolmates—

"You saw me in the station," the irresponsible count went on. "I had a glimpse of you. You hurried down another way so you wouldn't have to witness my amblings with Mrs. Martin Bedford. You are a model secretary, well brought up."

The paper was removed from her hands.

Mrs. Martin Bedford was a widow whose husband had left her a great deal of money. Judy knew her slightly. She wondered, with amusement, if she, too, had succumbed to the foreign charmer's wiles.

Outside the train ran through small villages where station wagons, or wives in family cars, greeted their husbands or guests. Not many guests tonight, mostly husbands. The week-end was ended. A working week was in progress. Judy turned to the window and wondered if among some of them they had found that priceless gift called security—if there were women who believed that marriage would endure through the years, just as the Rock of Gibraltar guarded the water road to Spain and the Plymouth Rock was as solid as it had been when the Pilgrims first knelt to pray. She had had ancestors among that group—strong men and gentle women. Marriage had not been a toy in their hands. It was a warp from which the fabric of a nation had been woven. Where had their children lost the way?

She thought of Ronald Birrell. His eyes were brave and tender. His mouth was strong. His will was clean and sharp as a sword. She wondered from whence his ancestors had come to those remote mountain districts. Sometime she must ask him. Strange that she identified herself with him, though their paths had traveled so many miles apart until recently. He was not the type of man for Abbey to use as a member of her train. He was sincere. If he loved her, it would be with a whole heart, not just half. But how could he love Abbey?

Men were dumb, so bitterly, ridiculously dumb! Why hadn't Craig taken her "no" for "yes" last summer—down in her heart it had been an affirmative word—tossed her into his car, and headed for Greenwich? He had done it with another girl. That line of reasoning was no good, Craig had loved that other girl, and she, Judy Rogers, had been a comfortable habit.

The conductor called their station. Judy was glad that only the chauffeur met them. She did not want to see Abbey. She was glad that her dinner was served on a tray in her room again. She found herself wishing that it would always be that way.

During the next two weeks she was unusually busy. Christmas was coming. There were wreaths to be bought, a tall evergreen to be ordered and its trimming to be supervised, presents to be selected. Two weeks after Christmas the contest winners in the fashion designs would be announced. This matter was of far greater interest to Judy than the gleam and glitter of the holiday season.

Downstairs everything was too gay, too bright—great silver wreaths with scarlet bows, and blue bows; holly and mistletoe supplied too lavishly; small, electrical lighted trees on every available table. Therefore she decorated her own room simply and used it as a haven during the evenings. She had a small tree, and she placed blue lights on its slim branches. She hung holly wreaths, crisp and fresh, at her latticed windows, and tied bright red bows on them.

Two weeks more, two weeks more, her heart kept singing. It made a refrain of the three words, and the train wheels chanted them; the wind blowing cold through the tall, barren trees outside her window sang them; the cheerful crackling of the log fire repeated them.

Two weeks more—and she could resign! The contest would be over. But suppose—suppose I don't win the prize, she murmured to herself now and then.

"But I will! If I think I will, I can't fail! You make life give you what you need, when it is good for you to have it!" she advised her faltering spirit at such times.

Abbey's wedding would take place toward the end of January. Already the guest lists were prepared. Invitations, which would be mailed three weeks before the day scheduled for the ceremony, were addressed, stamped, and waiting. The small book, in which gifts would be recorded to simplify the thank you notes for the donors, had been prepared.

The wedding cake and wedding supper had been ordered. The decorations had been chosen. The favors were prepared. There was nothing at all to do which would baffle a new secretary, Judy knew. Her conscience would not hurt her when she left.

Yet she would have consented to see the wedding through, she admitted, if it had not been for Ronald. He was growing disturbingly important. And Abbey found him too interesting, considering the fact that her wedding day, when she would marry another man, was so close at hand.

Judy was thinking of this when her telephone rang one afternoon. "Yes?" she asked, hoping that it might be Ronald, and provoked that she did.

"Judy?" It was Ronald! "Can you locate Abbey for me? It's frightfully important that I get to her—immediately! And she isn't around."

D. A. R. Hears Address By District Chairman

Mrs. John Graham,
Lancaster, At Meeting

Mrs. John L. Graham of Lancaster, newly elected chairman of the central district, was present Tuesday night when Pickaway Plains chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held its first meeting of the year. The members gathered for a luncheon served in the social room of the Presbyterian church at 12 o'clock. Mrs. Glenn I. Nickerson, Mrs. Glenn R. Bales and Mrs. C. D. Closson were hostesses for the occasion.

Mrs. Bryce Briggs, chapter regent, used the ritualistic opening service at the afternoon session. After the business period, Mrs. Graham was introduced by Mrs. Briggs. She outlined the history of the D. A. R. from the time it was organized fifty years ago until the present time. Mrs. Graham stated that at the close of the year the society expects to have 10,000 members. She spoke of the work which will be done this year for Student Loan Funds and approved D. A. R. schools.

Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker reported that the bronze tablets, which were to be used to mark the places in Circleville where the five Indian Trails met, were ready to be erected. These markers were made possible by donations from several organizations of the city.

Mrs. Orion King gave a talk of unusual interest on "Heraldry". She said that the origin of Heraldry may be traced to the earliest times. Some primitive writers assert that even Noah and Japhet had distinctive armorial bearings. After an extensive search the most ancient coat of arms was found on the monument of a Count of Wassenburg, dated 1010. Jacob in blessing his sons gave them marks of distinction, which the 12 tribes afterwards bore on their ensigns.

Continuing, Mrs. King stated that the earliest Heraldic document is a Roll of Arms made between 1240-1245. It contains the names of barons and knights of the reign of Henry III. In the early part of the 16th century, it was necessary for each person to produce authority for coat armor, crests and other devices with note of descent, pedigrees and marriages.

The study of Heraldry as a key to history and biology is becoming every day more and more acknowledged. Mrs. King then gave a detailed description of Armorial Bearings according to scientific rules of Heraldry.

Several members of the society took their family Coats of Arms and Mrs. King explained many points of interest in connection with them.

Miss Elizabeth Reber, with Miss Abbe Mills Clark at the piano, sang a group of songs including "A Pastoral", by Vercini, "Blackbirds Song", by Scott and "Dawn" by Curran.

Ellis Island day will be observed at the next meeting which will be held at the home of Mrs. Harry McGhee, Williamsport, Tuesday, Oct. 18.

Today's Fashion

SEASHORE RESORTS are filled with happy holiday visitors garbed in spotless white set off by a dash of strong color. One of the smartest debutantes prefers white sharkskin fashioned into lovely sailor frocks. This model has a simulated collar that is stitched down all over except for the revers section, which is loose and has royal blue piping in good sailor-collar fashion. The sleeves repeat the piping. The royal blue belt has a white section in front with blue lacing. The skirt is side-pleated all around, some of the pleats starting at the waist and others half way down.

children of Williamsport; Miss Margaret Hunsicker, of Circleville. Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Caudy and children, Mrs. Mary Caudy, Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Ingman and children, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hanawalt, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Pitt, Miss Beatrice Grice, Helen Winfough, Nellie Ingman, Edna Ingman of near Five Points and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. George Ingman.

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served in the afternoon.

Child Conservation League
Twenty members were in attendance at the luncheon meeting of the Child Conservation League, Tuesday, at the home of Mrs. J. E. Groom, Park Place. Mrs. Lemuel Weldon and Mrs. Ray Reid were hostesses for the affair.

Mrs. James I. Smith, Jr., new president, presided for the first time at the business session which followed the luncheon. During this time tentative plans for the year's work were discussed. The new year programs were distributed by the 1938-39 program committee including Mrs. Groom, Mrs. G. D. Phillips and Mrs. Howard Newell Stevenson. Mrs. Robert D. Musser was named one of the reporters for the year, another to be chosen later.

Other officers of the organization include Mrs. Karl Mason, vice president; Mrs. Sterling Lamb, secretary; Mrs. Ray Rowland, treasurer; Mrs. Emmitt Crist, program chairman for 1939-40.

A social hour completed the session.

When the club meets Oct. 4, Mrs. Glen Geib, E. High street, will be hostess.

O. E. S. To Meet
Circleville chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star will meet in regular session Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the chapter room, Masonic Temple.

Mrs. Burns Entertains

DON'T LOSE A WINNER
IF THE defenders are going to win a trick by ruffing, wouldn't you prefer to have it be a trick you would have lost anyway? Wouldn't that be better than having them take a trick you had expected to win? Then try to govern your moves accordingly, protecting your prospective winners and risking only the cards which are of no value to you anyway.

This deal was played in a team-of-four game, and at both tables the contract was 4-Hearts by South. At one table it was made and it was defeated at the other. The diamond Q was led in both instances. Where the trick was won with the A, declarer then led ning with prize for high score being taken at the close by Mrs. Sterling Lamb.

Lunch was served after the games by Mrs. Burns.

When the club meets for its next session, Mrs. Virgil M. Cress will be hostess.

Hart Family Reunion

George Hart of Logan was chosen president of the association at the annual reunion of the Hart family held at the State Park near Westfall.

Fifty guests enjoyed the delightful basket dinner served at noon.

The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. George Hart and family of Logan; Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Orvil Hampshire and family, Mrs. Emma Bone and daughter, Hattie Pleukhart, Lilly Bone, Amanda Hart, Bertha Hart and Louise Hart of South Bloomington; Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Cutright and family of Chillicothe; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Buchwalter, Marvin Wilson, Effie Poston, William Joseph, Eugene Wilson, Wilma Wilson, Lillie Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Watson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Rockford Hart and family of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lowery of Creola; Mrs. Mazie Kennedy and son of Amanda; Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Leist, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thomas and Olsie Diltz of Circleville; Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Cupp and family of Soutsville.

The next reunion will be held the first Sunday in August, 1939, at Ash Cave.

Birthday Party

Mrs. Joseph Brink, E. Union street, entertained at an informal party, recently, for her daughter, Jo Ann, on her fourth birthday anniversary. The afternoon was passed in playing games and contests, Tommy Tomlinson and Charmaine Skinner being awarded the prizes.

At the close of the afternoon the guests were served ice cream and cake at a large table lighted with candles.

The guests included Beverly Mumaw, Dickie Rhoades, Viva Lee Horn, Betty Jean McClure, Char-

At the other table the declarer won the first diamond trick with the K. Then when the heart A was driven out and West returned the diamond J, a low card was played from dummy and East ruffed, but South retained his diamond honor. As a result only two hearts and a spade were cashed against him.

SEEN ALONG FIFTH AVENUE

KNITTED CLOTHES are getting lovelier all the time, and the new models should bring an increased demand for knitted clothes. A charming frock in brown and white-striped zephyr knit has a bloused top, bell sleeves and shirred fullness at the front of the skirt on either side of a buttoned center front. Another model has its flared skirt ribbed in an all-around pleat effect. The ribbing is repeated at the breast pockets. Big pine cone buttons lend interest to this beige angora chenille model.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

SEARCH the asparagus bed and adjoining area now for any seedling asparagus plants which can be used to start a new row, thus enlarging your present asparagus bed. As you lift the young plants discard any which are found to have small, or unhealthy looking roots and replant only those with strong, vigorous appearing roots.

After the seedlings are lifted plant them in trenches, as illustrated in the Garden-Graph. Plant six to eight inches deep if the soil is light, and four to five inches deep if the soil is heavy. Space the seedlings 15 to 24 inches apart in the rows and have the rows three feet apart. Cover the plants with two or three inches of soil at first and as the plants grow, gradually fill in the trench with additional soil.

The crowns should not be covered to the full depth of the trench at first, since there is danger of the young shoots smothering before they can start their new growth.

A search of the flower borders will often reveal thrifty young plants of hardy annuals, such as zinnias, asters, marigolds, dwarf nasturtiums and calendulas and also of late flowering types of perennials, which may be lifted, potted and brought indoors for blooming.

After washing blankets, rinse them in water in which a block of camphor has been dissolved. They can then be stored without fear of attack by moths.

Buck Line May Average 209 And Backfield 194

COLUMBUS, Sept. 21—(UP)—If developments of 10 days' practice mean anything, Coach Francis Schmidt will send a Buckeye football eleven on the field this Fall, packing an average weight of 217 pounds from tackle to tackle, 209 pounds end to end, and 194 pounds in the backfield.

Besides being one of the heaviest teams ever to represent Ohio State, the 1938 gridiron representatives probably will be one of the fastest.

While not discriminating against by any means, the wily Buck mentor has insisted on speed and more speed to perfect a razzle-dazzle running and passing attack to overpower such potent enemy teams as Indiana, Southern California and Northwestern.

Tackles Massive

Two of the heaviest huskies on the squad—Co-Captain Carl Kaplanoff, 245 pounds of right tackle from Bucyrus, and Alex Schoenbaum, a mere 230 pounds of left tackle from Huntington, W. Va.,—stage almost daily foot races the length of the practice field and at no steam roller pace. Both appear to have cinched their old starting jobs at the tackles, key posts on any football team.

Charley Maag, Sandusky's sophomore contribution, weighing 218 pounds, who seems to be Schmidt's starting center choice, steps along with the fastest men on the squad.

The rest of the huskies in the front wall of the current varsity aggregation are not far behind in speed and bulk.

Sophomore Jerry Spears, Columbus, working at right guard, tips the scales at 210 pounds and Keith Bliss, veteran right end from Columbus, at 190 pounds. The "light-weights" in the forward line are Ross Bartsch, Orrville, left end, at 185 pounds, and Vic Marino, Youngstown, a squad guard, at 185 pounds.

With the guard spots still doubtful, Schmidt could step up the line weight average if he should call on Nick Rutkay, Youngstown, weighing 236 pounds, or Pete Gales, Youngstown.

TIGERS WORKING HARD FOR TILT FRIDAY EVENING

Line Getting Long Drills In Blocking, Charging; Walters To Kickoff

If the Circleville high school football team does not look much different Friday against Worthington than it did last week against West Jefferson it will not be because the squad has not had enough practice in preparation for this second game of the season.

Worthington comes here to vie with the Red and Black at 8 o'clock Friday evening and indications point to another large crowd despite the defeat by the Jeffs, 7-6, last Friday.

Each member of the Tiger squad from the most powerful first stringer to the lowliest substitute has been doing plenty of hard work this week in preparation for the joust. The line that played too high last week, finding itself tossed back time after time, is learning all the rudiments of "keeping the nose to the ground," at the hands of Assistant Coach Tom Armstrong. About 10 of the huskiest boys on the squad have been getting the mentor's undivided attention. They have charged up and down the field, squatted, pointed and charged until each, without any trouble at all, should be able to tell a spectator how many blades of grass there are between any given 10-yard stripes on the gridiron.

The backfield, that missed many blocking assignments against West Jefferson, has been stinging with a vengeance this week, toppling over would-be tacklers like so many match sticks.

Paul Walters, first string quarterback, will probably handle the kickoff assignment Friday as a result of form displayed Tuesday evening. The tall signal-barker put enough toe on the ball to drive it deep into opponents' territory in the Tuesday drill. The search goes on for a satisfactory punter, although Frank Woodward has the nod at the present time. Young Joe Straley, husky freshman, got off some good boots Tuesday and so did Roy Birchwell, another squad hopeful.

Worthington is expected to bring a fast team to Circleville, one that is certain to be stronger than West Jefferson. The suburbanites permitted Delaware's heavy team to score only 13 points. Cy Scott, quarterback, is Worthington's chief threat. He had Delaware in hot water several times, but couldn't get across the payoff station.

GALEHOUSE AND KRONER ASSIST INDIAN SQUAD

CLEVELAND, Sept. 21—(UP)—Pitcher Denny Galehouse and Infielder Johnny Kroner, two ball players who have been warming the bench of the Cleveland Indians most of this season, today furnished the spark that made the Tribe look like a contending club again in the American League.

The prize was only second place in the final standings and some extra cash but until Galehouse and Kroner collaborated in the field Tuesday to whip Washington, 9 to 1, the Indians had looked like a second division team for the last 10 days.
